Magazines such as the National Geographic and Natural History provided my first introduction to archaeology and related disciplines. Children’s books like Derrick in Mesa Verde and Derrick Among the Indians were read over and over. My first real introduction to Texas archaeology came on one of many trips to Garner State Park. One of the workers had been collecting artifacts along the Frio River and he had a copy of Volume 25 of the Texas Archeological Society - An Introductory Handbook of Texas Archeology by Dee Ann Suhm, Alex D. Krieger, and Edward B. Jelks. He let me read it and although I did not understand many of the technical terms I loved seeing pictures real Indian “arrowheads.” At the time I did not realize that I was looking at a volume that is today considered one of the more influential books of the time and one that was compiled by three of Texas’ best known archaeologists.

One day I read in that volume that Richard B. Worthington was the active Vice-President of the Texas Archeological and Paleontological Society and that he lived in Houston. The year was 1959. As soon as I was back home I called him and ask the familiar question “How Can I become an Archaeologist?” He invited me to attend the newly formed Houston Archeological Society. The meetings were held at the Ezekiel Cullen Building on the campus of the University of Houston. The memories of the early days of the society are still vivid to me. Although there were others who I consider milestones along the way to becoming a professional archaeologist, not one was more influential than certain members of the Houston Archeological Society during the time I was a regular member.

The person that I got to know the best was Wayne B. Neyland. My parents would drop me off at the meeting and he always brought me home. After the meetings he and some of the members always stopped for coffee and they would talk about archaeology. He also let me accompany him on some of his site finding excursions. Other members who supported me were Herbert Mewinney and Allen Duke. I will forever be grateful to these members for their willingness to help a young “Billy Moore” who would later become a graduate of Texas A&M University with a Masters degree in Anthropology and later the Sole Proprietor of Brazos Valley Research Associates. Mr. Duke penned a poem in 1972 entitled “Ode to Archeology” and I have included it here with permission from the Society and his family.

This was a collaborative project. I am very grateful to those who helped with the organization and production of this index. Colleagues whose advice was most helpful were Roger G. Moore, Jesse Todd, and Jim Warren. One of the tedious tasks for me was attempting to match site names with official site numbers. I was able to get some from the Archeological Sites Atlas but Jonathan Jarvis, and Jean Hughes filled in a lot of gaps by searching the site records at TARL. The creation of this index was a lengthy task and Rhonda K. Holley provided moral support when it was most needed.
Ode to Archeology

It gives me chills to think that I Might have passed archeology by
And settled on some other measure
To satisfy my need for spare time pleasure

I could be cutting gems from rocks or collecting antique clocks
I could be working, hobby-wise, Catching moths and butterflies. Or be down at Port Isabel Combing the sand for an exotic shell.

I would have missed the fun and thrills
Of Society digs on Texas hills
I never would have known the delight
Of stumbling upon an untouched site.

I have a list, a long, long list
Of all the things I would have missed.
But this means more, far more to me
Than all the pots and points I see;

The thing I never will forget,
Those friendly people-I have met!!

INTRODUCTION

General

The Houston Archeological Society (HAS) is a non-profit organization that serves the archeological community of Houston and membership is open to professionals, students, and the general public. The Society was formed in 1959 by a small group of individuals with an interest in archeology and the history of Texas. Most of the activities and talks in the early days focused on Harris County. Later, however, there was an increased interest in other counties in the Upper Texas Coast. The Society was incorporated on October 10, 1966. Members have participated in a variety of archaeological endeavors such as identifying and recording archeological sites and artifact collections; testing and excavation of sites prior to their destruction due to development and natural causes; and outreach projects designed to educate the general public as to the importance of protecting archeological sites. Also, HAS members are active participants in “Texas Archeology Month” each October. In the article by Linda Gorski (2015:11-16) entitled “The History of the Houston Archeological Society,” there is a complete list of field projects and publications documenting these activities. Meetings are open to the public and are held at 7:00 p.m. on the third Thursday of the month in Building 20 (Room 103) of Anderson Hall on the campus of The University of Saint Thomas. More information regarding HAS can be found on the Society’s website – http://www.txhas.org.

In the early days of the society, decisions had to be made regarding dues, format of the journal, time and place of the meetings, and special events such as field trips. In the June 1961 issue, Mewhinney wrote An Editorial Preface in which he suggested ways to improve the Newsletter (later the Journal). He was opposed to frequent name changes; fancy headings and attempts to make the Journal look like the daily papers; no “polysyllabic jargon;” more preliminary reports on work in progress (He wrote that “detailed and extended” papers are more suitable for publication by the Texas Archeological Society); contributors should be permitted to make comments and express opinions (papers should not be limited to field work).

Officers

During the 56 years the Society has been in existence, there have been 39 presidents and some served multiple terms. A list of these presidents and the years they served is provided by Linda Gorski (2015:12-13) in her article about the history of the HAS. The HAS presents various awards to deserving members. A list of past recipients can be found in Linda’s (Gorski 2015:13) as well as awards that have been presented to the society (Gorski 2015:13). Hubert Mewhinney, a noted Houston Post columnist, was the first Editor and Wayne B. Neyland was the first Chairman.
The holders of the various offices changed over time. Today, the Board Members are Linda Gorski (President), Louis Aulbach (Vice President), Tom Nuckols (Treasurer), Bob Sewell (Secretary), and Wilson W. Crook, III (Publications Editor). Issues of the Newsletter and Journal that provide lists of former officers and members are presented in Appendix I.

Publications

The first issue of The Newsletter of the Houston Archaeological Society appeared in November of 1959. It was a typed document that covered six pages of single spaced text. The Newsletter was how Society information was disseminated to its members. These newsletters varied greatly in length and this was mainly due to the number and length of articles submitted in time for publication. The first Newsletter had four articles and consisted of six pages while Issue No. 2 had three articles and only three pages. Issues three (1960) and four (1961) were referred to as The Houston Archeologist. The name reverted back to The Newsletter of the Houston Archeological Society with issue No. 5. In 1964 (Issue 11), there was a minor change in the name of the Newsletter. The first word “The” was dropped and it became known as Newsletter of the Houston Archeological Society and sometimes Newsletter Houston Archeological Society. It stayed that way until 1982 (Issue 72) when it was changed to Journal Houston Archeological Society. The two recent issues (133 and 134) are titled The Journal Houston Archeological Society.

As mentioned above, the first issues of the Newsletter were typed and stapled manuscripts with no formal cover. Issue No. 10, was published in 1963 and was the first to have a cover. This issue was very sparse and only contained the basic information plus a list of new officers. Issue No. 13 (1965) also had a cover but this one was more formal than before. The name of the Society was in large type at the top of the page and there was a border along the bottom. The names of the officers for 1964 and 1965 appeared on the cover above the border.

The cover became more elaborate in 1966 with Issue No. 16 when a drawing and poetry by Enos B. Comstock (published in Boy’s Life) appeared on the cover. One or more quotations were a regular part of the cover from Issue No. 16 through Issue No. 33 (1970). The next issues with a drawing on the cover appeared in 1968 (Issue No. 24) when a drawing of a Comanche warrior appeared and Issue No. 25 when a drawing of an Apache warrior was added. The artist of either drawing is not identified. Issues 134 and 135 are the first to be perfect bound and contain color photographs and maps.

Two major changes occurred in 1970 (Issue 34). The official name of the newsletter had been changed to Houston Archeological Society Newsletter and the logo that became associated with the Society made its debut (see cover to this document). This logo was described by the Editor as the “new look” and it adorned every cover until 1980 (issue 66) when it was reduced in size and enclosed in a border with the name of the society, issue number, and date.
This logo that served the Society so well for those many years was dropped in 2005 (Issue 129). The cover that year also contained the beginning of the first article. From 1980 through the present, the cover varied from photos, drawings, and text of the first article. The creator of the logo was HAS member Edie Cherry whose drawing portrayed ancient and modern man side by side making pots. According to Cherry (1970:34:1), “Although the two men are separated by time, they have much in common meeting physical needs, coping with the environment, and living with their neighbors. The pots represent his endeavors to meet his needs, and our endeavor to learn what he was like by piecing together the evidence that remains.”

The number of issues published each month varied from one to four depending on available articles. In 2000 and 2001, only one issue was published. Journal 128 was published for the years 2002-2004 and the trend of one issue continued through 2014 except for 2008-2009 when issue 132 was the second to cover two years. The last issues at the time of this writing are 133 for 2014 and 134 for 2015.

Membership

During the past 48 years of the Journal (1959-2009), the number of members has varied but there was always a core group that helped keep the society intact. Several members now deceased have been eulogized by other members in the Journal. These are Alan R. Duke (1919-1998), William L. McClure (1927-2002), and Wayne B. Neyland (1926 - 1972). I knew these individuals and can attest to their dedication to Texas archaeology and the HAS.

Alan R. Duke was one of the founders and charter members of the Society in 1959. He continued to be active in the society until his death in 1998. He was Chairman in 1963 and 1964 and Editor from 1965 to 1986. Alan was a prolific author with over 40 articles in the Journal and author and co-author of 11 installments of HAS Historic Notes. He was a regular participant in Society field projects and his leadership at the Goebel site (41AU1) and the Muller site (41HR74) remain as two of the more important sites to be investigated by the HAS. The Society honored him by bestowing several awards including making him a life member. More information about his accomplishments can be found in articles by Donald R. Lewis, Richard L. Gregg, and Bruce Duke. I remember him as one of the members who took an interest in a young boy with dreams of becoming an archaeologist one day.
William L. McClure is regarded by those who knew him as an outstanding avocational archaeologist and biologist. He was best known for his faunal analysis of specimens recovered from sites investigated by HAS members and his personal recording of numerous sites on White Oak Bayou. From 1975 to 1982, he was the sole author of 26 articles in the Journal that documented the results of his project. His reporting on faunal remains appear in 28 Journal articles, special reports published by the Society, and other journals and reports from 1982 to 1996. McClure was a past President and Director of the Texas Archeological Society and recipient of the “Golden Pen Award” from the TAS and the “Southeast Texas Archeological Research Award” from the HAS. He also was a valued consultant who was often asked to analyze faunal remains by such universities as Texas A&M, Rice, and Southern Methodist University. More information about his achievements and a list of his articles can be found in William L. McClure, Archeologist and Biologist by Leland W. Patterson, Robert E. Crosser, and C. R. Ebersole in Journal 124.

Wayne B. Neyland was one of the founders of the Society and its first Chairman. Alan Duke remembered him in a short eulogy where he states that Neyland’s passing “leaves a void in the Society that cannot be filled.” In spite of his bad health, “Neyland remained active in pursuing the study of Gulf Coast Archeology until the time of his death,” writes Duke. Wayne was the member who christened me Billy Moore, a name that remained on the membership roles until I renewed my membership in 1972 and he was my regular ride home from the meetings. I remember the day he drove from his home in the Houston Heights to Park Place to examine the flint artifacts I found on Sims Bayou that turned out to be natural cobbles. He also allowed me to accompany him on some of his site hunting trips and was always willing to “talk archaeology” with me.

Three members who have not been eulogized in the Journal are Hubert Mewhinney (1904-1973), Charles Richey (Cap) Ebersole, and Leland W. Patterson. Mewhinney was one of the founders of the Society and the first Editor. He was a noted columnist for the Houston Post, self-educated naturalist, author, artist, and pretty good flintknapper. My first recollection of Mewhinney was at one of the monthly meetings when he arrived with some very nice projectile points that he claimed he had found in the area. After the accolades had subsided, he confessed that he had made them. I bothered him frequently to take me on an outing and finally he agreed to let me go with him and a friend to the Grace Place in Colorado County. He attempted to educate me on identifying plants and animal tracks but I’m afraid I remember very little from the experience. Mewhinney wrote a column dated August 15, 1962 about our trip entitled “Just Before Dawn in the Haunt of the Red Wolves” in the Houston Post and refers to me as “an extremely inexperienced 18-year old boy named Bill.” He was one of the more colorful members. During the Jamison site excavation (41LB1) he stayed at night to guard the site. His bed was a blanket and his security blanket was a Winchester 30-30. He followed the same pattern at the Grace Place when I was there. He may be best known for his book A Manual for Neanderthals, published by The University of Texas Press in 1957 and currently available in reprint.
Leland W. Patterson joined the Society in 1971 and is known as one of its most active and influential members. He was present at every meeting and virtually every field project, often as the Director. He may be best remembered by some as one of the most prolific writers on all things archaeological in the state. When State Archeologist Patricia Mercado-Allinger presented him with the THC Award of Merit in 2014, she noted that he had authored or co-authored 467 publications in local, state, regional, and national journals as well as his involvement in the recording of over 150 prehistoric sites in Texas, Louisiana, and Ohio. HAS President Linda Gorski said that he “.... has undoubtedly given more professional credibility to the Houston Archeological Society than any other member.” Patterson served as President and Vice President of the HAS and Vice President of the Fort Bend Archeological Society. At one time, he kept the Journal alive and well by being the sole contributor. I never knew him personally, but I nominated him for the Golden Pen Award based on the incredible amount of articles he had written and he was its first recipient.

Charles Richey (Cap) Ebersole (1925-2006) was born Austin, Texas. Born in 1925 graduate of Lamar High School. From Texas A&M he enlisted in the Marine Corps. Graduated from UT Law School in 1948. Served in WW II and Korea and discharged as Captain. President of HAS and a Steward for THC. He was an election judge in the early 1960s and a founding member of Pct. 222 Democrats.
Just Before Dawn in The Haunt of the Red Wolves

Hast thou named all the birds without a gun?
Loved the wood-rose, and left it on its stalk?
—Emerson.

Jack Wray, the Houston insurance man, owns five middle-sized ranches in Colorado and Fayette Counties.
The one called the old Grace Place after a physician who owned it years ago is much the prettiest of them. It fronts on the Colorado River. There are two fair-sized creeks on it, with handsome sandstone bluffs and some swimming holes. Dogwoods, hawthorns, and a few blackhaws grow along the ravines. Both of the chief species of bluebonnets are abundant and there is also a good deal of Drummond’s red phlox.

ALL THOSE things, of course, bloom in the spring. Not a great deal is blooming right now, except for some of those little shrubby mallows that were also named after Drummond, Malvaviscus drummondii; one small and unexpected patch of purple gentians; a few white asters and some sort of tiny pale blues that look very much like the one that is the year’s earliest flower hereabouts, the least bluet or Houstonia minima.

The berries and the leaves of the dogwoods have not yet turned red.

THERE ARE a good many deer on the place and a fair number of Texas red wolves, or Canis niger (Bartram) to make it clear that this animal, is not really a timber wolf.

Old Wray figures on keeping both the deer and the wolves. In short, although he may not read Emerson often, he has caught on to the idea of naming the birds without a gun. People who work on those ranches are entitled to kill their deer if they wish but the privilege extends no further.

A FEW YEARS ago some of the landowners in Colorado County were getting a little worcied about the increasing number of red wolves. They arranged to have some professional trappers brought in, equipped with those cyanide guns that Frank Dobie dislikes so much, guaranteed to kill anything that bites down on the scented piece of rabbit fur — for instance, wolves, coyotes, an occasional household cur, skunks, bobcats and sometime even a cow or two.

Wray would have none of it. He told the trappers to stay off his land. He needed his wolves to keep up the quality of his deer by killing off the feeble, the sickly and the occasional fawns with screwworms.

ALSO, HE NEEDED his deer to feed his wolves, lest they eat up all the rabbits on the place and then try to kill a calf or two.

I was up on the Grace Place the other day,
along with Frank White, who is an experienced woodsman, and an extremely inexperienced 18-year-old boy named BILL. A minute or so after 5 AM, after the sky had got so light that it had washed out nearly all the stars,
the late-rising Belt of Orion and the Milky Way included, I was squatting on my heels a few yards from the ashes where White had cooked supper the night before.

A half-grown possum came shuffling up, switching his nose and his ears this way and that, scouting the remains of last night’s supper but unable to figure out exactly where it was. It had been put away out of his reach.

THE POSSUM finally saw me, stopped and gave me a suspicious marspial stare. Since I threw no rocks at him and shot off no firearms, he finally decided I must be either friendly or too feeble to be dangerous.

I whistled three or four times, trying to wake White so he could get up and make friends with this trusting, not to say gullible, possum and perhaps even reward his trust by giving him something to eat.

The possum paid no attention whatever to the whistling. Neither did White, whose only response was a snore.

THE POSSUM shuffled clear around the ashes of the cooking fire three times, going clockwise. Never finding anything to eat, he shuffled off toward the creek, hoping for better luck elsewhere.

This is not meant to give the impression that possums are especially abundant on the Grace Place but only that they seem unduly trustful. No other possums showed up but I saw a dozen deer. Fresh coyote tracks were all over the trail that morning.

No wolves showed up. They have not yet learned to trust Wray, much less his friends.

SECTION 4, PAGE 7
METHODS

This index is designed to enable researchers to find information in the 134 published journals of the Houston Archeological Society more easily. It contains three main sections. These are author and title, site numbers, and key words. Each issue was read thoroughly in order to be able to add key words to the various indices. Creating the author index was straightforward as the author or authors are usually mentioned with each article. However, there were instances where important information is presented with no author named. Examples of these are comments about HAS field schools, workshops, and other Society business. These appear under “Editor” as the author or person responsible for their inclusion in the publication. In some cases, newspaper articles discussing topics relative to archaeology were included without identifying the author. These are indexed as “no author.”

This task became more difficult with the indexing by site numbers and key words. It is my opinion that just the mention of a site number that is part of the title of the article is not sufficient. Often, the site in the title is compared to similar sites in the text of the article. Therefore, these site numbers are included as well. In some cases, sites are mentioned by name only and that makes it difficult to identify the actual number. I was able to find some site numbers by comparison with other reports and searching the Texas Archeological Sites Atlas. Jonathan Jarvis, Head of Records at the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory (TARL), was able to help me with this and his work resulted in a large number of site names being married to numbers. Some sites were given names by the person who found the site but in too many cases these sites were not recorded at TARL. These names are included with the parenthetical explanation that no site number was found at TARL. If a site has a recorded name it follows the number in parentheses.

The same strategy was followed for the Key Word index. Key words in titles are the main focus of this section, but significant words in the text were also included. Selecting key words is very subjective. In general, the types of subjects included include rivers, creeks, and bayous; bays and lakes; major historic sites by name; faunal and lithic analysis; and references to HAS field schools or projects where members participated. In some cases, titles of articles are included because the subject is important to the general area. Patterson’s (1999c) article entitled “Darl and Yarbrough Points in Southeast Texas” and the article by Black (1988) entitled “Ceramic Analysis” are examples.

Other forms of data are presented in appendices. The first appendix (Appendix I) is a list of newsletters and journals by volume and page that names officers and members of the Society. Appendix II is a list of counties mentioned in the newsletters and journals with the number of sites referenced in each county. Appendix III is a listing of referenced sites in other States.
HAS Journal 134 contains an article by Linda Gorski (2015) entitled “The History of the Houston Archeological Society.” In addition to a brief sequence of events that describe the purpose and success of the Society, she also lists the 36 Charter Members, all previous holders of the office of President, awards given by the Society to its members, awards presented to the Society by other organizations, and HAS field projects and publications. The Journal also published a short article that I wrote entitled “HAS Memories.” As a Charter Member, I wanted to share some of my reminiscences of the early days of the Society.

There are some problems with page numbers in some cases. Sometimes, the pages are not numbered and other times they are not correct. These problems are highlighted in red for easy recognition.
